HOW TO SELECT ROSE TYPES FOR YOUR HOME

The four types of roses catalogued on the inside of this folder are the most practical for growing in this area. Each type has specific qualities which make it desirable for given locations. Below are shown and described these differences for your information.

HYBRID TEA ROSES

Characteristically hardy roses with large blooms, single stemmed. Vigorous growth habits. They bloom well from June into October. In this versatile class you will find a full range of colors in a wide variety of types, both patented and non-patented. Very desirable for cutting, the plants range in height from about 15 inches to four feet. Ideal for beds, borders and in formal or informal gardens.

FLORIBUNDA ROSES

This class is noted for its bushy growth habits, and as a result are widely used for mass plantings, for shrubbery, foregrounds and edgings. Blooms are generally smaller than Hybrid Teas, but grow many per stem. They are very hardy and require relatively little care. The Floribundas bloom from early spring until late frost. This group includes types also known as Polyanthas and Bush Roses.

A Note About Our Roses—All our roses are carefully selected by our own rose experts who have had years of experience with roses. We select only the very finest stocks in varieties which experience shows will do well in this climate and soil. When you purchase roses from us, you are assured of the very finest stock money can buy.

CLIMBING ROSES

Climbers now possess many of the more desirable characteristics of vigorous growth habits, larger blooms, abundant flowering, and a wide range of color. Many varieties grow to heights of 15 feet or more, and some bloom intermittently all through the season. They are perfect for wall, fence and trellis, even sprawling over banks, and they require a minimum of care.

GRANDIFLORAS

This newest type of rose combines the best features of Hybrid Tea Roses and Floribundas. The Grandifloras are characterized by their height which often reaches 4 to 5 feet, with large clustered flowers on individual stems. They are ideal for cutting. Although not as large as the Hybrid Tea, the flower size is larger than the Floribunda or bush rose.

Many varieties described inside. Many more to choose from in our huge stocks.
